From the Reporter, Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio.

One of the most beautiful of nature's lovely spots is the varied township of Tallmadge in Summit County, Ohio. Here are rolling, undulating and beautiful forest scenery; hill, wood and meadow spread their charming panorama before the eyes of the traveler and as he looks, he thinks, here is a beautiful spot where one may live after nature's model in beautiful simplicity and revel in health and happiness.

Yet, even here in this Eden, where fruit and flowers and pastoral scenes wear the heart from the city and its turmoil, insidious disease steps in and destroys a Paradise. It was thus in a beautiful hillside home; surrounded by an orchard, with flower beds surrounding it, the cozy white house looks like the abode of comfort. It is the home of E. J. Vance, who cultivates small fruits in summer and in winter plies the trade of broom maker. Brist with a lovely wife, darling child and a pretty farm, an outsider might look in vain for the thorn hidden among the roses. But a few years ago this life became wretched when the father and husband was afflicted with what appeared to be an incurable malady. During the still, small hours of night when sleep and rest, twin blessings, were denied him, terrible suffering would seize upon him; gradually the disease wore upon him, wrecking his nervous system and clutching with cold fingers at heart and brain. This went on for a long time and friends saw no relief before him but the best sleep of death. But it is now all changed; freed from this over-hanging heritage of illness, E. J. Vance is once more able to enjoy life, the comforts of home and the joys of family life. How it happened is recorded in the following interview:

"I had treated with so many physicians," said Mr. Vance, speaking of his recovery from his long-time illness, "that I began to believe nothing could be done for me. I tried two doctors at the Falls and then spent a lot of money on specialists who made great boasts in Akron, but I grew no better."

"What did they say about you?" "My heart was affected," suffered so severely with heart trouble that I wonder I lived to tell the tale. My life was a torture. I expected every time I had a bad spell, and that was nearly every night, that I should die. I grew so nervous I was well high insane."

"How then do you account for your present healthy condition? You certainly look very well now?" "When I was nearly distracted with the pain of my disease and my inability to get help, a boy came along and threw into my carriage a little pamphlet, advertising the merits of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I thought I would try them, but hesitated because I believed it could do no good; but that night I had a worse attack than usual, and as soon as I was able to get out I drove over to Cuyahoga Falls and bought the Pink Pills for Pale People at the drug store of F. Schnee & Co."

"And the result?" "I have never had another attack of the complaint."

"What was the nature of your disease?" "Doctors named it variously, as asthma, goitre, nervous prostration and heart trouble."

"What did they call the disease?" "Most of them called it 'heart disease'; two told me I had the worst form of heart disease, valvular disease of the heart, and assured me I could never be any better."

"How did it affect you?"

"THERE IS SCIENCE IN NEATNESS."

FIRST OF APRIL FOLLY.

Time Honored Observances of All Fools' Day.

HISTORIC APRIL FOOL JOKES.

How Our English, French and German Cousins Celebrate the Day—Washing the White Lions—Baron's Famous Honk. Some Familiar Tricks.

Feodory, sir, doth walk about the orb.

"Twelfth Night."

The young American lustily shouts when he has begun the first day of April by playing some joke on Tommy Jones, next door.

April fool! Go to school!

Tell the teacher you're a fool!

He fondly imagines that he is doing something very original as well as witty. While we will not question the wit of his reform factions, it may be well enough to inform him that he does not have a monopoly of this kind of humor.

All around the wide world young jokers are having the same sort of fun with their unsuspecting and gullible companions.

Little Johnny Bull bellows out his "April fool" in the same familiar phrase, while young Sandy hoots in Scotch, only he calls it "gouk" instead of "fool." Little towheaded Fritz runs through the streets of his German village and shouts a guttural rhyme which goes:

Aprilkenkuk!

Mach d'Augen zu!

and which means, "April cow, shut your eyes."

The French boys play jokes too. And when a comrade comes from the harness shop, where he has been sent for "strap oil," they greet him with cries of "Poison d'Avril!" which, to give a liberal translation, means that he is a "silly fish," although literally it means "fish of April."

Older people of other countries, as well as Americans who are no longer young, take advantage of April fool day to play silly tricks. The Germans go about it in a heavy, clumsy sort of way, but their native characteristics bar out anything which is not conceived in a good humor and which cannot be received in the same way. With phlegmatic earnestness they send each other

EXCHANGE OF LABOR.

THE BASIS OF A NEW CO-OPERATIVE SCHEME.

A System That Substitutes Certificates of Deposit For Money—An Outgrowth of the Hard Times—Interesting Details of the Scheme.

Communism in a new form is being tried by an association of enthusiasts who have their headquarters in Chicago, but who are scattered about the Union. This is a sort of communism which does not demand that the members shall all live together in one big house, eat corned beef and cabbage on the same day and do any sort of work that may be allotted to them. It is not even necessary that they live in the same colony. The identity of the members is not lost, but each individual is allowed to go on with the business that suits him best, live where he pleases and pile up just as big a fortune as he can. It is a sort of communism that a man can take home with him. He is called upon to make no radical change in his mode of life in order to enjoy its benefits.

The idea is beautifully simple. In Chicago there is a big warehouse which is called the Labor Exchange. Into this any member of the society may put any product of his labor for which there is likely to be a demand from the other members, and in return he receives certificates of exchange, which he can swap for the same storehouse for other articles which he may need of an equivalent market value.

The object of the exchange is to provide a market for the products of labor. If a harness maker in Chicago, for instance, found that he had a larger stock than he could dispose of with the market in its present state, he could take his surplus to the exchange and receive for it certificates. These certificates he could exchange for potatoes, which a farmer in Iowa had sent in. The farmer could in turn exchange his certificates for the harness which he needed, but had not the money to buy, and the harness maker, although he could not sell his harness for money, could exchange it for farm products and other goods which he wanted, but did not have the cash to purchase at the stores.

This is the theory of the scheme. It was originated by G. B. De Bonnard of Indianapolis, Ind., and was the outgrowth of hard times. The Chicago colony is only a branch of the association, but other colonies are planted in various states, each with its warehouse. One branch in Lynn, Mass., is to manufacture shoes. Another in California is to can and dry fruits. One in Kansas is to raise corn and wheat and still another will furnish beef and pork. When the chain is complete, it is expected that everything necessary to man's support, and not a few of the luxuries which add to his comfort, will be obtained at the labor exchange. When this time comes, the modern communists can defy the monopolists, the money sharks and the bankers. The money market may be as tight as a new tin bucket or as loose as a rainwater barrel in August for all they care.

The members are asked to make no individual sacrifices for the general good of the association, and they need take only such products to the exchange as they wish to use. They conduct their business with outsiders in the same manner as before the association existed, using the vulgar money of commerce.

C. T. Hillman, an elderly German of considerable means, is president of the Chicago branch and takes an active personal interest in promoting the welfare of the colony. F. Marion Campbell, an energetic young business man, is the vice president of the branch and devotes considerable time to the enterprise.

"We are young yet," says Mr. Campbell, "but we have a rapidly growing membership. There are tailors, fruit canners, shoe, harness, dress and hat makers among us, and the farmers are beginning to come in. I enrolled one farmer the other day who has a big surplus stock of corn which he is going to send to the warehouse and draw against as he has need for it. We have members who want it, and they have goods he wants. There is one thing we are short of, and that is groceries, particularly staples like sugar and salt, but this will soon be remedied when the chain of exchanges is complete."

Perhaps Mr. Campbell expects to induce the Sugar trust to join the new movement. He thinks that the enterprise will furnish work for idle men in an indirect way and explains that when farmers ship in more product than they care to trade out they can induce their farmers to join the exchange and with their pay in certificates, with which they can get clothes, shoes and other necessities at the warehouse. There can be no inflation of the commodity currency, because when a certificate is exchanged for goods it is destroyed, and others are only issued when goods are deposited in the storehouse. Political economists will watch with interest the development of this new idea in co-operation.

Dangers of the Grip.

The greatest danger from La Grippe is of its resulting in pneumonia. If reason care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for La Grippe, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that this remedy is a certain preventive of that dread disease. It will effect a permanent cure in less time than any other treatment. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by C. N. Nye, cor. Barnett House, Schiabeck's drug store, 225 N. Market, E. L. Janson, 300 W.
